

Polly

Ever have a friend who's as sweet as can be, and you love her dearly, but there's just that one thing she does that makes you want to scream? Well, that's Polly! She's soft, fluffy, adorable, and loves to sit in your lap and cuddle. Sounds perfect, right? Well, almost, except for that one little thing. When they passed out maternal instincts, Polly must not have been paying attention. She seems to have an inner beast that emerges around kittens - she has an unfortunate tendency to terrorize them, and just can't seem to help beating up on poor Calvin and Jasmine if she's in a room with them. So, she has to be kept separate from kittens to keep her dark side in check.

Since Polly is feline leukemia positive, that means that with her living in the KittyCam room, Calvin and Jasmine have to live in the bedroom/sunroom area. That's been working, but we really can't have too many cats at the sanctuary who have to be kept separated from certain other cats.....Polly is one of the lucky few we are able to accommodate. She came to us as part of the Great Kitty Rescue in Pahrump, Nevada through the Best Friends organization. And if she doesn't straighten up, we've threatened to change her name back to the unfortunate, if visually appropriate, name she came to us with - Skunkette!
